Your Summer Store Was Never More Attractive

Every section teems with interest at this time. Our stocks were never in better condition than right now. The assortments are more extensive, more complete and contain far greater numbers of high-class exclusive creations of distinctive individuality than at any previous season. The opportunity to make selections from the widest possible range of desirable styles is now at its best. These splendid assortments of merchandise, together with cool, well ventilated floors, pleasing surroundings and courteous service makes this place one of Richmond's points of interest. We want you to visit the store this week, and especially do we ask that you place our values in critical comparison with others. We KNOW, that quality for quality, our merchandise is sold at prices as low, and in some instances lower than those which prevail in many stores. WHITE PLAGUE AT JAMESTOWN

An Exhibit of What the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis is Doing.

(By Charles Frederick Stansbury.)
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
NORFOLK, VA., May 26.—Dr. Charles R. Grandy, of Norfolk, who is the secretary and treasurer of the Virginia State branch of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, while attending the recent convention of the association in Washington, suggested to that body the advisability of holding their next annual convention at the Jamestown Exposition. He also pointed out to his fellow members the value of giving at the Jamestown Exposition next year an exhibit of methods of prevention and cure of the great scourge. The association did not, however, see its way clear to changing its hard and fast rule of holding its conventions at Washington, not wishing to set a precedent which might cause embarrassment in the future.

Dr. Grandy was, however, successful in getting the association to agree to submit a comprehensive exhibit at the Jamestown Exposition which would be an object lesson to the world concerning the prevention and cure of the world's greatest scourge, tuberculosis consumption. Unfortunately, the funds at the disposal of the association are not sufficient to maintain such an exhibit for more than six weeks or two months, unless some tortuous circumstances should increase the resources in the meantime. A tuberculosis exhibit even for that period at the exposition, will, however, Dr. Grandy thinks, be of great value to the medical profession, and the world at large.
The exhibit will consist of specimens showing different stages of the disease, pictures of rooms used, models and specimens of houses, tents and buildings, etc., used in sanitariums for the cure of tuberculosis. There will be statistical tables, instruments and apparatus used in the cure of the dread disease. Some of these exhibits have already been shown in large cities and their effect in education in the matter of stamping out the disease has been incalculable. The exhibit has been seen by at least 80,000 people and is at present attracting the attention of the thoughtful people at Milwaukee, Millions will see it at the Jamestown Exposition next year.

The National Association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis is composed of physicians who do the real work of stamping out tuberculosis throughout the country, and of laymen who are deeply interested in the movement.
Forces have been joined by the Association of American Physicians and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in a fight against consumption. Both bodies have held meetings and it was decided that in the future they would work together in combating the spread of the great white plague.
Among the distinguished physicians who are working earnestly in this great cause are Dr. E. L. Trudeau, of Saranac Lake, New York; Dr. John L. Moran, of Boston, Mass.; Surgeon-General Wynnan, of the Marine Hospital service, and Dr. William Welch, of Baltimore.
Dr. Farrand, of New York, will go to Norfolk to attend the preliminary of placing the exhibit and he will have a able coadjutors Dr. James Hunter, of the Norfolk clinic, and Dr. Charles R. Grandy.
Five dollars' worth of ostrich feathers (five cents' worth of broom) and a little skillful flattery made a Yates Centre woman pay $18 for a hat the other day.—Kansas City Journal.

PATHETIC CASE OF A YOUNG CONVICT

Broke Into a Kitchen Because He Needed Food—Splendid Reformation.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
BOYDTON, VA., May 26.—There is something peculiarly sad and touching, but is nevertheless interesting, about the case of a young man named William Blackwell, who was convicted some two years ago before the County Court of Mecklenburg, under the charge of breaking into the kitchen of a widow lady living near Buffalo Lithia Springs. He was sent to the penitentiary for two years.
Young Blackwell made no denial at his trial of having broken into the kitchen, but said in justification of his act that he was driven to it by the pangs of hunger; that he was a lonely youth in a strange land, without friends and without home. Judge Barksdale, in passing sentence upon him, was visibly affected, and spoke kindly and encouragingly to the prisoner, who stood all the while weeping as the judge proceeded with the solemn words which were to consign him to a felon's cell. This heartless youth was taken immediately after his trial to the State prison, and such was his exemplary and many course that he soon had secured the friendship and good will of the prison authorities, who interested themselves to have him paroled, which the Governor did some months ago. It is interesting to know something of the youth's early life. He says he is a native of Scotland, and when about fourteen years old his father put him aboard a merchant ship, bound for Australia. He says he was so badly treated by the crew that he deserted the ship and got on board another vessel coming to San Francisco, California. From there he went North, but later came South, where he wandered from place to place until he was landed in prison. Since he was released from prison he has secured work on a farm near Waverly, Sussex county, and is doing well. The whole character of young Blackwell seems changed from a life of indolence and thriftlessness to one of industry and a determination to do his duty and make a man of himself. The credit for the turning aside of this boy from his wayward habits is due to the Christian influence of the prisoner's friend, Mrs. Landon Mason, of Richmond, who interested herself in bringing about a reformation in young Blackwell's life, and nobly she succeeded. Much credit is also due to Mr. C. J. Faulkner, of this town, who was first to lend a helping hand to this poor unfortunate by writing to Mrs. Mason and requesting her to look after Blackwell's spiritual welfare. Blackwell shows his appreciation of the valuable services rendered him by his benefactors by writing letters to them, expressing his deep gratitude for their timely interest in him. Mrs. Faulkner has lately received a letter from him, in which he says he is making plenty of friends in his new home, and that he is attending Sunday school. He says he is trying to be gentle, kind and good-hearted, and to live up to the principles of his dear beloved mother. He contrasts what he calls his past follies with his prospects for a brighter future. He says he is going to stay his time out with his employer in Sussex, and then he is going to Richmond to live and start himself a bank account, for, he says in his letter: "I am going to try to be married to a dear little lady, who does not condemn me for my past follies, but respects me for being a better man." He closes "with my best and truest regards for Mrs. Faulkner," and requests her to send him some reading matter, saying he loved to read every book he could get in his possession. If the same efforts were made by Christian people generally to reclaim the fallen, that has been done by these good ladies, it would seldom be the case that a man convicted of any crime would have to be brought the second time before a criminal court.

Massachusetts Shade Trees.
Shade trees on Massachusetts State highways were planted in 1905 to the number of 3,235, and in 1904 to the number of 726. The varieties planted in greatest numbers during 1905 were Norway, white and sugar maples, in the order named, numbering 1,351 in all, and 818 elms. Vines to the number of 300 were also planted in 1905.
Vacant Houses in Philadelphia.
"There are usually from 10,000 to 20,000 houses vacant in Philadelphia," says a real estate agent. "Enough for a population of 150,000 souls."
His estimate would mean that sometimes an average of one house in every ten is unoccupied.—Philadelphia Record.
Cheyenne Styles.
"Black Coyote" was in town to-day. In dress he always keeps a little ahead of the fashion plates. To-day he wore a blue sack suit with white polka dots, and his trousers were creased on the side just like those of Ed. the Seventh. England.—El Reno (Okla.) American.
